I've never written a proposal for an art project before. What are you looking for?

It varies depending upon what is being requested for the proposal. However, a good rule of thumb for proposal format is to design it much like a newspaper article: a proposal rendering on top, followed by a few sentences that summarize the project, followed by a description that goes into more detail of what the artwork will look like and its concept.

How do I apply for the Emerging Artist Program?

The Emerging Artist Program is a subdivision of the Artists' Market. In the Artists' Market application, there is a place for you to indicate interest in Emerging Artist program. All artists are juried in to the market first, and then are eligible for the program. If you are juried into the show and not selected as an Emerging Artist, you may still participate as an Artists' Market exhibitor. You may share a space with another artist in the market, if that artist is also juried into the show.

How can my band play Artscape?

Applications for emerging musicians/bands interested in performing at one of our 2017 festivals are now closed. If you are an emerging musician/band and are interested in applying to perform at one of our 2018 festivals, please check back in May 2017, when the Sound Off Live! applications will be posted.

The Sound Off Live! application is for emerging musicians/bands interested in performing at one of our three festivals (Light City, Artscape, and Baltimore Book Festival). Sound Off Live! is a special event, which takes place in October, where emerging musicians/bands selected from the application process perform live in front of a panel of judges, to possibly earn a performance spot (concert stage performances) in one of our three festivals for the following year.

If you are not interested in Sound Off Live! and would like to be considered for Artscape 2017, please email Shelia Goodwin (sgoodwin@promotionandarts.org).
